Where the city of Varna stands today, in remote antiquity there was a small Thracian settlement called Odessos. In the 6 th century B.C. Greek settlers from the town of Miletus on the coast of Asia Minor came here, founded a colony which was named after the already existing Thracian town and fortified it with strong walls. The new colony, an independent city state, kept up a brisk trade with the interior of the country, with the towns on the coast of the Black Sea, then called Pontus Euxinus, as well as with the islands and ports on the shores of the Mediterranean. As early as the 4 th century B. C. Odessos was minting its own coins.

When the Balkan Peninsula fell under Roman domination at the beginning of the 1 st century A. D., Odessos became an important and highly civilized town of the Empire. The constant devastating raids of different peoples and tribes, invading the land from the North, brought about the gradual decline of Odessos from the 4 th century onwards. During the first period of Byzantine rule (in the 6 th century), the town had another brief spell of economic prosperity which came to an end with the arrival of the Slavs who established themselves permanently in our lands during the 7 th century. They gave the town its new name — Varna. It became and remained an important commercial and military centre of the newly founded Bulgarian state during the whole of its existence.

At the end of the 14 th century, when Bulgaria was conquered by the Turks, Varna declined. Fifty years later the plain around Varna was the scene of a great historical event. The Polish — Hungarian king Vladislav, who had started on a campaign against the Turks, gave battle under the very walls of the town. The king himself perished in the fight, and this is why he is known to posterity as Vladislav of Varna. In the 17 th century Varna became an important commercial port. The town was turned into a strong fortress which served as a military and naval base of Turkey in her wars with Russia.

Having been under Turkish domination for five centuries, Bulgaria was liberated by the brotherly Russian people, and, on July 27 th 1878 Varna welcomed the liberators it had so long expected.

After the liberation Varna grew into a bourgeois — capitalist town, carrying on a brisk trade through its port, rebuilt in 1906. It also developed as an industrial centre. Thus conditions were favourable for the formation of an active workers movement which soon led to the foundation of a strong workers communist party. Later, when the fascist regime was established in Bulgaria, the former played an important role in defending the interests of the working people of Varna.

From 1941 to 1944 Varna was one of the principal centres of the armed resistance against the German invaders and the Bulgarian rulers in their pay.

After the victory of the 9 th of September, Varna embarked upon the road of socialist construction. It has grown into a large commercial, industrial and cultural centre and is fast becoming one of the most urbanized cities in this country.

The wonderful combination of the green coast, the hot sun, the vast beaches with their fine sand and the expanse of blue sea lend Varna and its surroundings an unusual charm and have made it a famous sea — side resort. It is, indeed, „the gem of the Bulgarian Black Sea coast".

Every year thousands of Bulgarian and foreign visitors spend their holidays at the numerous comfortable hotels and rest — homes of the newly — built resorts Drouzhba and Golden Sands.
